OTHERS THAN HEINZE STUCK

BY A WALL STREET BAND OUT FOR EASY MONEY.

re Queer Loans Discovered, Involving Men Aiready Named-Seeking the Masier Hand - Birmingham Got a Slice Field and Sherwood Think Again.

Acting District Attorney Nott is satisfed that the Windsor Trust Company loan transaction was the work of a band of Wall Street men inspired solely by the desire to fatten their bank accounts by the sale of property that didn't belong to them. He believes that some experienced hand was behind the deal and that Donald L. Persch, the curb broker now locked up in the Tombs on a charge of grand larceny, was only an agent.

He does not think that an attack has been made upon F. Augustus Heinze through these queer loan transactions for any other reason than that the band found him an easy victim. Complaints received at the District Attorney's office show that practically the same game has been worked on other borrowers, and in these other transactions appear the names of some of the men mentioned in the Windsor Trust Company deal. It is likely that other arrests will be made within the next twenty-four hours. one of them of considerable interest.

Sterling Birmingham, manager of the Sterling Birmingham, manager of the loan department of the Windsor Trust Company, admitted to the acting District Attorney yesterday that personally he had received $250 out of the transaction. In this admission may lie the explanation of how the Windsor Trust Company came to lend its good name to the deal.

Birmingham still insisted, however, that he believed all the time that the trust company was placing a bona fide loan for Charles Katz of the Eastern Brewing Company of Brooklyn. He did not explain how under those circumstances he would receive a personal gift to $250. Apparently it was merely a little token of regard. Birmingham didn't say who had paid the money to him. When he was asked two days ago by reporters if he had got $250 he denied it positively.

One of the most interesting developments yesterday was the discovery by Leonard J. Field, son of Jacob Field, the veteran speculator, and head of the curb brokerage firm of L. J. Field & Co., 74 Broadway, that he had suffered from a confusion of ideas when he talked with Mr. Nott on Tuesday. John F. Sherwood, Field's former cashier, also discovered that he, too, had been mixed up in his mental processes on Tuesday. Both Field and Sherwood made revised statements.

Sherwood is the man who got the $110,000 worth of Heinze collateral from the Windsor Trust Company, believing it, he says, to be the property of Donald A. Person, ledic's former cashier, also discovered that he, too, had been mixed up in his mental processes on Tuesday. Both Field and Sherwood made revised statements.

Mr. Nott's comment.

The amendments to the Field-Sherwood stories only added confusion to the mass of contradictory statements that the acting District Attorney has collected in this case. It's a winner in that way. No two persons connected with it tell the same story, and they seem to be endless in number. Every little while the acting District Attorney goes away by himself and stands on his head to see if the thing looks any clearer that way.

Sherwood seemed to be nervous when questioned about the $10,000 that his former employer has. Mr. Field himself brought Louis Marshall as his counsel to the District Attorney's office.

"Mr. Field was confused yesterday said Mr. Marshall, "when he said he had cashed the $10,000 check and delivered the money. He finds that he really held the money for Sherwood. All Mr. Field got was the $300 interest for the use of his $50,000."

Adams, so Rosenthal contends, wrote for more margin and the Heinze people went to Boston and made a tender of the amount of the loan, but found only a few of the bonds left. They got out an injunction restraining Adams from dumping any more on the market and that injunction is still pending.

Curiously enough a lawyer named Esser from Mount Vernon also showed up at the District Attorney's office.

"Mr. Field was confused yesterday" said Mr. Marshall, "when he said he had cashed the $10,000 check and delivered the money for Sherwood. All Mr. Field got was the $300 interest for the use of his $50,000." the money for Sherwood. All Mr. Field got was the $300 interest for the use of

While Mr. Field and Sherwood were the District Attorney's office Assistant extrict Attorney Keogh was called in Mr. Nott. Only a little while before the Keogh had received a complaint of Cam. The inspection of Persch's account with the Carnesia Crust Company and his cancelled checks disclosed some interesting facts. This account was opened about ten days before the Heinze collateral was obtained from the Windsor Trust Company case. MONTICELLO SWEPT BY FIRE

Thirty-six Buildings Burned in County Seat of Sullivan County-Se Residents Turn Out-Some Lose Ef. fects-Many Dwellings on Fire at Once.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 11.-The village of Monticello, county seat of Sullivan county, which has had several serious fires recently, was nearly wiped out by flames last night. The entire business part of the village on both sides of Main street from Court House Park to the Monticello House, the oldest hotel in the village and the only hotel now standing, was laid waste.

Thirty-six buildings were destroyed, with a loss that is estimated at from $500,000 to $750,000. The fire started at 8:15 o'clock last evening in the electric light plant in the rear of the Palatine Hotel, on the north side of Main street, and is supposed to have originated from a short rouited wire. The building was in flames before the employees knew there was any danger. The flames burst through the roof.

Monticello has three fire companies, Mountain Hose Company, Neptune Hose Company and Rescue Hook and Ladder Company. All of these companies were quickly at the scene of the fire.

> A high northwest wind was blowing and carried the fire from the music hall directly to the Palatine Hotel. The Palatine had been filled with guests but when the fire started in the electric light plant they feared that the hotel might take fire and the majority began to remove their property. Trunks were piled in the street, while the guests skirmished around to find wagons to take them to a safe place.

> At this time no one had any idea that the fire would assume the large proportions it did later. While the Palatine was burning the wind shot the flames across the street to Burns & Hammond's department store and the residences of Dr. J. F. Curlette and John F.

With the fire going on both sides of the street the firemen were practically helpless and it was then decided that the entire village was in danger. A call was sent to Port Jervis and Liberty for help. In a little over an hour several scores of firemen of Port Jervis with a arge amount of hose were rushed to Monticello by special train and a few minutes later they were followed by a delegation of the Liberty firemen with a quantity of hose.

This assistance was needed because

The hose was destroyed. Spreading from the Palatine Hotel up and down both sides of the street the flames raged unchecked. Sparks were carried by the wind all over the village and fires were started in the roofs of dwellings on a dozen parts of town at the same time.

When the fire shot across the street it was only a moment when the entire building was in flames. There were about sixty-five guests in this hotel and as it had not been believed that it could possibly catch fire they had made no preparations for removal. All of the guests were dressed but they saved only the clothing they wore.

A vacant lot between the store of Fred Carlisle, which was the last building to burn, and the Monticello House, gave the firemen a chance to pour the water in a vital spot and check the blaze. During the fire the high school, St. John's Church and rectory caught fire several times, but the blaze was conquered by the use of garden hose.

There were large quantities of fireworks in the two stationery stores destroyed by the fire and when the flames reached these there was the largest Fourth of July celebration that Monticello ever witnessed. The explosion of chemicals in the two drug stores also caused excitement and hampered the work of the firemen. Explosions were constant and the firemen were in danger for several hours. The cancelled checks show a payment of firemen were in danger for several hours.

CRITICAL DAY IN BOLIVIA

VILLALON SHOULD BE INAU-GURATED AS PRESIDENT.

Fears That Friends of Mentes May Try to Keep Him in Power-Issue of War or Peace With Peru at Stake-New Administration Favors Settlement

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.-To-morrow will e the critical day in Bolivia, when Senor Villalon, the President-elect, is to be inaugurated. If he is installed in office without trouble from the opposition and gets the Government of Bolivia well in hand there is slight chance of war beween Bolivia and Peru over the boundary award recently made by the President of the Argentine Republic. At least this is the view officials here take.

The award was highly unsatisfactory o President Montes, the retiring Bolivian Executive, whose attitude has been quite belligerent. Villalon, however, wishes to work for peace, and his policy is such that the supporters of Montes have threatened to create an upheaval in Bolivian affairs that will leave Montes in the Presidential chair.

The State Department has received several despatches from La Paz and Lima concerning the situation. It is learned that President Villalon intends including Gen. Pando, commander of the army, in his Cabinet. It is known here that Gen. Pando is distinctly in favor of accepting the terms of the Argentine President's decision concerning the boundary and is for the conciliation of Peru and an effort to reach a compromise with the Government of Lima which will make he award less onerous to Bolivia.

The fact that a man who believes thus is to be taken into the Cabinet is believed here to mean that the President will listen to his advice and that consequently the dispute between Bolivia and Peru will be adjusted. The only danger lies in a coup d'état by President Montez. Should he remain in power trouble, in the opinion of observers here, will almost Señor Montes has lost but few opportunities to complain bitterly over Argentine decision in the boundary matter. In a recent message to the Bolivian Congress he reiterated former statements which irritated both Argentina and Peru. While the United States is watching the situation with interest it cannot be learned that any action has been taken further than to assume charge of the Argentine legation in La Paz and the Bolivian legation in Buenos Ayres. This was done some weeks ago at the request of the Bolivian and Argentine Governments.
